May Demo

Our May demonstrator was watercolor artist Chris Coyne from Rockport, MA.

Chris uses Arches 140 lb. cold press paper, usually cut into half or quarter sheets. For our demo he used a whole sheet. Instead of tape he uses 4 clips to hold the paper to the board and sketches with a No. 2 pencil. Once the sketch is done Chris wets the entire paper. He paints with really rich and bold colors since the colors will dry 50% lighter. He prefers tubes of paint instead of the pans when working on large paper because a lot of color needs to be applied.

The sky and clouds were painted first then the water, rocks, and boats. The rocks in the foreground were built up with more opaque layers than the rest of the other elements.

Except for the winter months Chris prefers to paint plein air. If a painting cannot be completed while outside Chris will make observations and take photos so the painting can be finished in his studio.

More than halfway done (below).
